Vienna, April 10, 1870

My dearest friend,

Pardon my atrocious audacity in haunting you with no end of requests.
I am going to make you the victim of the Proverb "Give a man an inch and he will take an ell".

Some weeks ago I related to you a melancholy story of a former servant girl of ours, who married an actor; Mr Rudolf Krone, whom I take herewith the liberty to introduce to your kind notice, advice or eventual recommendation. By assisting him to get on better than he has done till now, I am sure you do an act of charity for which you will not only have the blessings of the persons concerned, but also add to the many obligations I have towards you, and for which I shall be grateful for ever and a Day. Let me hope that for the sake of this Day which I give you to boot, you will allow me to sign myself yours sincerely

W. Haegel
