Zwei Aerzte machten eine Kur, Der eine war ein Doktor nur, Der andere war Professor;
Doch wußt' er's drum nicht besser.

Völklabruck. 2./7 1888

My dear friend,

When I was a drudge in school, I did not more impatiently expect my holidays, than I now, in the dreariness of my exile, expect your visit. Dryden in his Alexander's Feast sings " Rich the treasure Sweet the pleasure, Sweet is pleasure after pain."

Pain I have felt to read in the Fremdenblatt that you could not perform Franz Moor.
I hope your indisposition was but a slight one. Or were you disgusted to play that arch-rascal on the eve of appearing in your natural character as a sterling good creature?

Whereas my young folks from Graz will not come before the 20th of July, we can enjoy the treat of having you with us even longer than you have promised. And as to your intention to sleep in any one of our miserable inns, you had best not think of it.
Our little room looking into the garden is at all events, although not up to what you are accustomed to, better than any one at our inns, besides that you are not disturbed by the turmoil of an inv.

Over and above you would delight my wife to have you as a guest. And fancy the luxury of reading no end of chapters with you lying in bed and me at your side sending you to sleep with my explanations.
Now this being granted, I shall be at the Station on the 12th when the train is due from Salzburg in the evening.
Meanwhile do your best to preserve your health and rejoice your faithful friend
W. Sloeger
